

December 24, 2013

I haven't met David Hughes in person yet, but when that happens, I will shake his hand with gratitude. He was an amazing editor and great supporter of my new memoir: Runaway Amish Girl. I was at my wits end at trying to find a professional editor when I received an email from a fellow author suggesting I contact David. I am glad I tried one more time at fulfilling my task of finding someone that understood my writing. David took the manuscript and made the stories come to a jubilant life without altering the writer's voice. I couldn't stop reading my own writing after all the editing was done because everything just flowed so much better and smoothly. David is hardworking, compassionate, selfless, and an honest man. Nowadays it's hard to find a total stranger and trust them with the precious work that took years to write. He truly was a God sent and I am sure my next book will be going to him for editing services as well!

Best wishes and blessings,

Emma J. Hingrich